BIO

Taurus 1984 is producer/songwriter/musician Alastair Jenkins and Bobby Cole, based out of Swansea in Wales. Born from an adoration of 1980's pop culture, hooks and grooves, Taurus 1984 stands tall in the burgeoning synthwave, retrowave and retro-pop music genres.

The duo works with a regular set of artists who contribute to the overall sound and instrumentation, including Tim Sudbury on guitars and Steve Sax on saxophone. Jenkins also employs a revolving door-style setup of guest vocalists that include Abi Davies, Jeris Spencer and Phil Colwill.

Their debut soundtrack album for short film Hard to Kill was released on World Cassette Store Day 2018, while their hotly anticipated second album, 'Dream Warriors', is due for worldwide release on 29 May 2020.

"With this stonking second album from Taurus 1984, the 80s never sounded so good...this is such a positive record that couldn't have come at a better time. It's on repeat for the foreseeable." - Electronic Sound Magazine

"Such is Dream Warriors by Taurus 1984. To analyse it after a few streams is to deny it endless fascination and discovery. To find out what's actually behind all that rich electro pop sound is its reward to us, fans of the summer of 84, and lovers of music that respects and honours it." - Keith Williams (Legendary MTV Music Video Scriptwriter and Conceptualist)
